DUFLOS DEPARTS.

The Female Doctress and her Household Leave the Town Sud-

Madam Duflos, Monsieur Duflos, the infant Duffes, the nurse and a young Carlborni, who constituted the traveling sanitary party left the city yesterday. The great French doctress packed up her luggare, paid her bills and moved out. She stated at the Millard hotel that she was going to Council Bluffs, and would residents in that immediate neighborshortly return. Tuesday she ordered hood that the house should be occupied her wagon and musicians shipped away and they went.

There will now be many who will take oath to it that the French doctress has either swindled somebody or been paid a lerge purse by the doctors and dentists to get out. Upon all evidence so far at mar, thetoric and literature, natural hand both these surmises are incorrect. In the first place she seems to have settled every score, and in the next the local medical profession was never sufficiently interested in her to squander much money in suppressing her. It is been arrested for a number of robberies re-cently, now has complaints hanging over him who can not speak English. It is to be regretted that her departure was made so auddenly and unexpectedly. There are a large number of people in the city from points outside who have come here at great expense to submit to her treatment. She also has local patients who have been hopeful of great benefit at her hand, These, of course, will be sorely distressed. It is not dis covered, however, that she has defrauded any one, as she is not known to have taken any money for treatment, and she sold her medicines for what they were evidently worth.
